

ABSTRACT

5       The medium data read out section reads out the bank code and account number from the medium, the read out bank code being recorded in the first memory, and the read out account number being recorded in the second memory, or to be recorded in the second memory if not recorded where the medium is subsequently returned to the customer. Also, the medium read out section performs the 10      same process described above on other mediums inserted by the customer, producing a determination of insertion being completed upon finding no more insertions of other mediums from the customer. The account balance data drawing section draws and collectively calculates the 15      balance corresponding to the read out account number specified by each read out bank code, by referring to the account data accumulation section.
